GIRL GUIDES

We don't—in one sense—expect our girls to really attain unto the high "ideals" in the movement, for they are very high, but the very fact that they are reaching towards these "ideals" is in itself a splendid moral education. Their watchword day by day is "Excellence."

The girl remains in this "tenderfoot" class under instruction for three weeks and is then examined by the Senior Patrol Leader. If she passes she is entitled to wear the very pretty foil badge branch.

Now let us glance at the laws that every "tenderfoot" must learn and promise, faithfully to put into practice, and guide her life are she can pass into the "Guides."

I would call particular attention to this, as it will go no little way to remove prejudices and frivolous objections.

First of all we insist that a "Guide" honor must be trusted. Will any sane person raise an objection to this?

Is it not a source of much encouragement to know that in a "Girl Guide" company, say of forty girls, each girl has been taught that when she says "on my honor, such is the case," that assertion is to her just as sacred as the most solemn oath. And should she fail in this, should she violate her honor, she becomes what is known as a "Dead Guide," and brings discredit upon her company.

If she shows herself to be an "impossible" girl, a girl who cannot recover under correction and discipline and cannot be trusted to faithfully carry out an order, she then ceases to be a "Guide" and her captain demands the return of her badges, and she is never allowed to wear them again.

That is to disgrace that all right minded and proud girls shrink from and in all my experience I have never as yet seen a girl expelled from this splendid organization.

In the next place a "Girl Guide" must be loyal.

Mind you this is not "loyalty" in the common acceptance of that term. Nowadays when you speak of a person being loyal you generally mean devotion to king and empire. But a "Girl Guide" is more than that. With her "loyalty" carries a very comprehensive meaning.

It is to her, as she is to the heavens and as deep as the sea. It is truly catholic or universal. She is taught "loyalty" to her own home. Home ties and home confidences to a "girl guide" are very sacred and not for the outside world. She will never confide—not even to her dearest friend—the secrets of the home circle. She brings into the home a sunshine that warms all hearts and her influence—like heaven—is tuning down all discord and strife.

Just before I left Saskatoon a lady stopped me on the street and said: "Since my daughter joined the Guides she is a changed girl. Hitherto she moped around with no particular object in life. But now all is cheerful. She has got bright, cheerful and happy, and is such a blessing to us all!"

I was so pleased to be told that and I thanked that girl for living up to the "ideals" of the organization.

As I write today that same girl is the Senior Patrol Leader, of one of the best companies in the city of Saskatoon, and when the Duke of Devonshire, the governor general of the Dominion, paid a recent visit to that city, he signalled out that girl, shook hands with her and complimented her on the smart appearance of her company. She writes to me regularly and never fails to impress upon me how much she owes to the "Girl Guides."

She has found her "mission" as I understand she is about to sail to join a company of "Girl Guides" who are doing excellent work "somewhere in France."

We will give her a splendid "Girl Guide" send-off and I have no doubt from what I know of her fine character that she will prove faithful and loyal to the end, even though it be in France.

Let me give you another instance that happened just before I left Saskatoon, for this part of the world it clearly shows the popularity of the "Guides."

It was Thanksgiving Day and a holiday. During the whole time I was in St. James I had never been to a place of amusement, such as a theatre. My special work demands all my time. Well, on this particular day there happened to be a really good company playing at the theatre, and I was very desirous to see the play. While walking along one of the busy streets, near the theatre, I quite accidentally met my Senior Patrol Leader to whom I have already referred, accompanied by two other patrol leaders of St. James "Girl Guide." The usual salutes were given and I said to these girls: "I have just made up my mind to go to the Empire theatre, suppose you come with me?" They gladly assented. It was late when we got to the theatre and all the best seats were taken. However, I got three seats for the girls far back in the second gallery circle, very uncomfortable. I went downstairs, saw the manager in his office, who was the very essence of politeness. I told him the unfavorable position we were in and asked him, could he possibly find us better seating accommodation.

The manager asked me where these young ladies "Girl Guides" of the city. I replied certainly, they are, "Well," he said, "bring them down here. I have a high respect for the "Girl Guides" and you and they shall be presented by me with a box all to yourselves."

She brings into the home a sunshine that warms all hearts and her influence—like heaven—is tuning down all discord and strife.

Just before I left Saskatoon a lady stopped me on the street and said: "Since my daughter joined the Guides she is a changed girl. Hitherto she moped around with no particular object in life. But now all is cheerful. She has got bright, cheerful and happy, and is such a blessing to us all!"

I was so pleased to be told that and I thanked that girl for living up to the "ideals" of the organization.

As I write today that same girl is the Senior Patrol Leader, of one of the best companies in the city of Saskatoon, and when the Duke of Devonshire, the governor general of the Dominion, paid a recent visit to that city, he signalled out that girl, shook hands with her and complimented her on the smart appearance of her company. She writes to me regularly and never fails to impress upon me how much she owes to the "Girl Guides."

She has found her "mission" as I understand she is about to sail to join a company of "Girl Guides" who are doing excellent work "somewhere in France."

We will give her a splendid "Girl Guide" send-off and I have no doubt from what I know of her fine character that she will prove faithful and loyal to the end, even though it be in France.

Let me give you another instance that happened just before I left Saskatoon, for this part of the world it clearly shows the popularity of the "Guides."

It was Thanksgiving Day and a holiday. During the whole time I was in St. James I had never been to a place of amusement, such as a theatre. My special work demands all my time. Well, on this particular day there happened to be a really good company playing at the theatre, and I was very desirous to see the play. While walking along one of the busy streets, near the theatre, I quite accidentally met my Senior Patrol Leader to whom I have already referred, accompanied by two other patrol leaders of St. James "Girl Guide." The usual salutes were given and I said to these girls: "I have just made up my mind to go to the Empire theatre, suppose you come with me?" They gladly assented. It was late when we got to the theatre and all the best seats were taken. However, I got three seats for the girls far back in the second gallery circle, very uncomfortable. I went downstairs, saw the manager in his office, who was the very essence of politeness. I told him the unfavorable position we were in and asked him, could he possibly find us better seating accommodation.

The manager asked me where these young ladies "Girl Guides" of the city. I replied certainly, they are, "Well," he said, "bring them down here. I have a high respect for the "Girl Guides" and you and they shall be presented by me with a box all to yourselves."

It is to her, as she is to the heavens and as deep as the sea. It is truly catholic or universal. She is taught "loyalty" to her own home. Home ties and home confidences to a "girl guide" are very sacred and not for the outside world. She will never confide—not even to her dearest friend—the secrets of the home circle. She brings into the home a sunshine that warms all hearts and her influence—like heaven—is tuning down all discord and strife.

HON. HELD BY A HAIR

No Member of Alliance Can Afford
To Rest on Oars at This Time

It is recorded that a German soldier coming into possession of a hair that had fallen from the head of Von Moltke, the military genius of the war of 1870, gave it to a celebrated French jeweller, charging him to use it in fashioning a keep-ake that might be handed down from generation to generation. The French jeweller set to work and in the course of time the German opened a box to inspect for the first time the finished creation. He found an Imperial eagle, wrought exquisitely, in gold and suspended from the beak by the hair of the great Von Moltke, the arms of Alsace and Lorraine, and the superscription was, "You hold them hit by a hair."

Today the Germans, intent upon world domination, are held in check, as it were, only by a hair. Every additional ounce of energy that is thrown into the conflict upon our side will have a determining effect upon the issue. No member of the Alliance, no matter how sorely tried, can afford to rest on his oars at this juncture. It is the pressing duty of each to exert its full strength to the end that the war may be brought to a speedy conclusion. Canada proposes to do her part, and by the intelligent mobilization of her available resources, to bring her maximum power to bear upon this issue. But before she can carry out this purpose she must first ascertain what her human resources are, she must provide herself with a complete inventory of her effectives, female as well as male. This inventory will be taken on Saturday, June 22, when all residents of Canada, of sixteen years of age and upwards will be required to register their names and furnish the information necessary to their proper classification in Canada's National Directory of War Workers.

SUMMER SESSION SCHOOL TEACHERS

Arrangements are now practically complete for the Summer School, for teachers which will be held this year as usual at the University of Alberta in July and August.

The standard courses in agriculture and gardening, household arts, fine and applied art, manual arts, first aid and physical training will be offered as heretofore.

According to the regulations of the department of education, British and American teachers whose professional standing is recognized in Alberta are required to complete courses in history, civics, school laws and regulations and geography with special reference to Canada in order to become qualified in the province. Instruction in these courses will be given by C. Sansom of the Calgary normal school and Miss Dickie and W. A. Stickle of Camrose.

Several courses are being offered this year for the first time. Teachers who wish to specialize in primary work will have an opportunity of securing more complete training in this field. This course will consist of lectures, demonstrations and class discussions. Special attention will be given music, dramatization, storytelling and games. Dr. Coffin of Calgary will have general charge of the instruction in this course.

To meet the needs of teachers who may wish to further perfect themselves in oral French a course will be given wholly in this language. Not only will the course include practice in speaking French but will give considerable training in method in teaching the language with a careful study of the texts in use in the schools.

For the first time this year teachers have the opportunity of qualifying for first class certificates as the Summer session. Three courses of unusual interest are being offered, one in educational psychology, one in administration and a third in educational problems. In these courses the latest educational theories, devices and practices will be explained and discussed. Such work will be of the greatest value to teachers who wish to qualify as principals and vice-principals.

HEALTH HINTS

J. W. MacQueen, D.D.S.

Last week we noted that the health hints of a normal individual which simply are:

1. Walking, 7 miles in two hours.
2. Running 1 mile in 8 minutes.
3. Lifting: Pushing body up from a lying position, face down, ten times.
4. Test for abdominal muscles: From a lying position on back sit up and touch toes ten times.

5. Digestion: Good appetite, clean tongue, no pain or uneasiness after eating.
6. Bowels: One regular action daily.
7. Nervous system: Able to sleep 7 or 8 hours, to concentrate the mind for several hours at a time, to control the emotions under provocation, to maintain a cheerful disposition at all times.

These are the tests of the Life Extension Institute, which is becoming international in its influence for physical perfection. Just how far short we come of normal efficiency will appear from the following bill of particulars urging the government of U. S. to appoint a National Vitality Commission.

Over-fed and under-exercised men are on the increase, resulting in obesity, weak limbs, soft muscles. These become easy and early victims to organic disease.

2. An increase of 10 per cent has occurred in ten years in deaths from diseases of digestive, nervous, arterial and pulmonary systems.

3. At least $500,000 in U. S. ages between 18 and 60 have evidence of organic disease.

4. There are constantly 1,900,000 Americans ill with preventable diseases.

5. Four out of ten deaths are preventable.

6. Two billion dollars is the estimated annual economic waste due to preventable disease in the U. S.

7. Not less than 75 per cent of school children need attention for physical defects or impairments.

8. Nervous diseases and mental disorders are on the increase and are not due to overwork but to improper balance between work and rest, incorrect eating, nervous and emotional excess, lack of exercise and other hygienic crimes.

9. More than 600,000 persons in U. S. died in the year of this investigation and need not have died if they had followed the ordinary rule of health. To Old age comes not from years but from chronic infections, accumulated poisons, etc.

Health is a human right; nature wants us to have it, and we can know how to have it, how to keep it and how to restore it if lost. We keep it, however only during good behavior. We must keep the laws of our being, else we suffer the consequent illness. When we disobey law, we get out of tune, we invite discord. Health is the natural, the harmonious condition. This world is a harmonious world. Man has admitted all the discordant conditions by his blunders, his mistakes.

The law of our physical being demand air, food, exercise, sleep, elimination of waste or refuse, proper mental attitude.

If these are supplied in proper condition and in proper proportions we have health or physical harmony, but if the proper proportions are interfered with we have the discordant condition which is disease. As a general thing we disturb the proper balance by too much food and too little exercise. Again we disturb the proper balance by too little exercise of the muscular system and too much strain on the nerves to which is added too little sleep, also as a result, perhaps of too little exercise we have the discordant condition of the eliminative organs. Sadness, despondency and other adverse mental conditions have an adverse effect on the physical organism. We need to learn just what our own circumstances and environment causes us to neglect and supply this by special effort.

By Dr. MacQueen, graduate of the Life Extension Institute, New York and the International College of Distinguished Physicians, Chicago, both of which are recognized and sanctioned by Mayo Brothers of Rochester, Minnesota, in fact Dr. William Mayo is one of the experts connected with the former institute and graduate of the latter and are associated with the Mayo Brothers' hospital.

EDMONTON EXHIBITION HAS BIG ATTRACTIONS

The Edmonton Exhibition Association has decided to call Wednesday, July 10th, United Farmers' Day at the Edmonton exhibition.

In the broad section of the Edmonton exhibition prize list an error has occurred in class No. 377 for the special prize offered by the Western Canada flour mills. This class calls for home-made bread by a professional. This should have read "non-professional," and the class is intended solely for women and girls.

Excursion rates of fare and one-third are in force for the Edmonton Exhibition, July 8 to 23. Special trains will also be run, particulars of which will be announced later.

The automobile races at the exhibition on Friday and Saturday, July 12th and 13th, are attracting the attention of a number of our local sportsmen.

Miss Lucille Belmont, the ballroom queen who will appear at the Edmonton exhibition for the first time, is very personable and skilful in her manipulation of the two and three parades which she uses in making her debut.

The Great War Veterans will have model trenches at the Edmonton exhibition, bombing demonstrations will be given and the life of the soldier depicted in a very forceful way. The officials who have at heart the welfare of the wounded soldiers in the military hospital and Convalescent home in Edmonton, have arranged for a display at the Edmonton exhibition, which will include a "Red Triangle" hut and a model tank.

Commercial Travellers' day which will be observed on Friday, July 12, promises a lot of fun. The Knights of the Grip intend to make their presence known and are going at their plans with their characteristic energy and ingenuity.

CHURCH CHIMES

EDGERTON NEWS

There have been several changes this month in the staff of the Merchants bank. Mr. L. W. Crawford of Calgary has been appointed accountant and has entered on his duties. Miss Helen Mitchell has left and Miss Fowers has taken her place.

Several Edgerton men including B. B. Hunt, Albert Appleby, Thomas Bazley, Chris Otterholm, W. J. Smithson and Richard Vanstone have gone west to C. to look for fresh grazing land for their cattle. Land in this district has recently been sold so such an extent that there is no longer sufficient range for cattle, nor winter feed.

National registration takes place this week, registration being held for the most part in the schools. In Edgerton the registration office will be the office of H. C. Boyd, barrister.
